ABOUT

Amherst College Press (ACP)

publishes groundbreaking, peer-reviewed books that are free to read and download, with print editions available for purchase. ACP strives to ensure that our titles and associated media are available and accessible to anyone who wants to read or use them. The press operates out of Frost Library at Amherst College, a knowledge-sharing hub in a liberal arts college community.

Our areas of focus include art history and visual studies; digital and game studies; Latin American and Afro-Luso-Brazilian studies; literary and media studies; music and sound studies; and Russian, East European, and Eurasian Studies. We also have deep interests in activist studies, environmental and energy humanities, multilingualism and translation, public and community humanities, and all forms of justice-oriented scholarship and methodology.

We publish all titles open access on Fulcrum, a platform created by Michigan Publishing that offers rich multimedia integration and optimization for long-term preservation and accessibility.

The debut release from the New England Jazz Collaborative (NEJC) is a bold statement from an innovative new force in contemporary large ensemble jazz. The album showcases six original works by member composers Jeremy Cohen, Darryl Harper, Matan Rubinstein, and Sam Spear. The compositions traverse an expansive musical landscape—from New Orleans-inspired collective improvisation and lyrical balladry to Third Stream experimentation, funk, and West African highlife.

New England Jazz Collaborative is an artist-run nonprofit collective dedicated to expanding the audience for jazz and related genres by commissioning, presenting, and documenting new music by a diverse group of living composers. Its current members/composers include Jeremy Cohen, Darryl Harper, Matan Rubinstein, Sam Spear, Eric Hofbauer, Randy Pingrey, Zahili Gonzalez Zamora, Jason Robinson, Ellie Pruneau, Bob Nieske, Philip Ryan Goss, and Temidayo Balogun.

NEJC's programs have been featured in The Boston Globe, Boston Magazine, and on WBUR's Morning Edition, and have received support from the National Park Service, Eastern Bank, Cambridge Community Foundation, and Mass Cultural Council.

ACP RECORDS is Amherst College Press's open access record label for new jazz recordings. It supports the values and practices of scholarly publishing—collaborative peer review and academic rigor—in music. Artists use Creative Commons's flexible licensing to share their work under terms they determine. ACP Records supports the creation of new knowledge outside of traditional commercial models, fostering a novel space for musicians to share work that is freely available to listeners. Series Editor: Darryl Harper, Amherst College. Advisory Board: Regina Carter, Violinist & MacArthur Fellow; Xavier Davis, Michigan State University; Tom Welsh, Artist Manager.

"In a series of wide-ranging contributions, Local Ecologies maps a new arc (and structure) for thinking about ecology and politics."

—Christopher Heuer, University of Rochester

Local Ecologies: Artistic Investigations of Eastern Massachusetts is an innovative multimedia exploration of the diverse coastal and river ecosystems of Eastern Massachusetts. The book's rich archive of essays, interviews, and artistic projects reveals the region's layered Indigenous, colonial, and industrial histories, showing how art can deepen understanding of place through strategies for reading the ground with greater care. The book's contributors reflect on sites such as Walden Pond, Deer Island in Boston Harbor, New Bedford Harbor, and the Merrimack River, tracing histories of use and interpretations of place, exploring contemporary responses to those legacies through creative acts of reclamation. At a moment when infrastructures of cultural memory are increasingly under threat, Local Ecologies insists on art as a vital mode of collective reckoning and possibility.

Kirsten Swenson is associate professor of art history at the University of Massachusetts, Lowell. She is the author of Irrational Judgments: Eva Hesse, Sol LeWitt, and 1960s New York (Yale University Press, 2015) and, with Emily Eliza Scott, co-editor and author of the volume Critical Landscapes: Art, Space, Politics (University of California Press, 2015).

Rebecca Uchill is director of the Center for Art, Design, and Visual Culture at the University of Maryland Baltimore County. She was previously a faculty member and director of community engagement initiatives at the College of Visual and Performing Arts at UMass Dartmouth. She has held curatorial positions at institutions including Mass MoCA, the Indianapolis Museum of Art, and the Carpenter Center for the Visual Arts at Harvard University.

EnTwine

Critical and Creative Teaching with Twine

Edited by

Emily Christina Murphy

& Lai-Tze Fan

"EnTwine is a must-read if you're interested in interactive or non-linear storytelling . . . an inimitable collection that is truly critical, creative, and inclusive."

—Jentery Sayers, University of Victoria

"Contributors argue that the branching structure of Twine allows communities of making to show us narrative possibilities beyond the 'official story' that are liberatory, oppressive, strange, or just outright missteps . . .

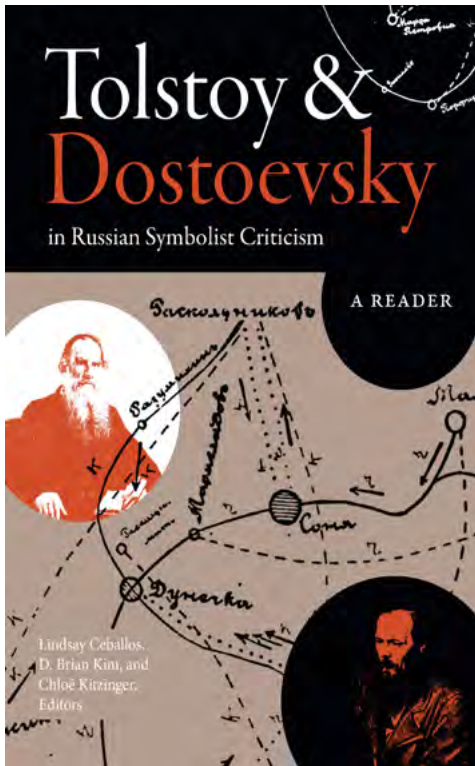

a welcome addition to a variety of fields."

—Joshua Daniel, Southern Illinois University

The first full-length collection devoted to teaching with the popular digital story-telling platform Twine demonstrates how Twine helps to forge communities of practice committed to learning and sharing together, inside and outside of classrooms. The book's case studies range across humanities, STEM, industry, and activist contexts. Authors from around the world share how they use Twine in teaching. Readers will find practical examples in the Twine Objects featured at the end of each section as well as a wealth of open-access resources connected to the book's digital version.

Lai-Tze Fan is an associate professor and the Canada Research Chair in Technology and Social Change at the University of Waterloo, and an associate professor II at the Center for Digital Narrative, University of Bergen, Norway. She is director of the interdisciplinary U&AI Lab at University of Waterloo Faculty of Arts, and an editor of the open-access journals electronic book review and the digital review.

Emily Christina Murphy is an assistant professor at the University of British Columbia, Okanagan, Director of the ReMedia Infrastructure for Research and Creation, and a 2024/2025 Killam Laureate. Her research focuses on multimedia cultural memory, and her current book project analyzes graphic-novel biographies and popular feminism in contemporary digital publishing.

At the turn of the twentieth century, Symbolist writers and thinkers at the forefront of Russian modernism cast Fyodor Dostoevsky and Leo Tolstoy as their chosen ancestors—examples to be exalted, repudiated, and ultimately surpassed. Their writings transformed the way these novelists were read within and beyond the Russian Empire. But many of these seminal essays either have never been translated from Russian, or exist in unreliable translations that are now over one hundred years old. The volume opens this globally influential body of criticism to a new anglophone audience.

Following the California Gold Rush, writing by local Latinas was increasingly published in the California Spanish-language press, including many women who were not wealthy or of elite social standing. Ovalle Perez identifies a diverse selection of Latina voices, focusing particularly on social justice messages and creative works. She traces how Latinas leveraged rhetorical strategies that were both socially performative and literary in a culturally specific Latinx context. Taking an intersectional feminist approach paired with deep historical investigation, Vasto Pensamiento, Vast Thought centers the words and stories of these women writers and public speakers, providing transcriptions and translations of numerous key texts. These texts offer insight related to nineteenth-century Latina personal and political investments across both sides of the border, allowing us to see the connectedness of rhetorical strategy and Latina self-fashioning in the public sphere.

Vanessa Ovalle Perez is an associate professor of English at California State University, San Bernardino. She also serves as assistant director of CSUSB's Center for the Study of Correctional Education, where she organizes and teaches Prison Education Project creative writing classes for incarcerated students.

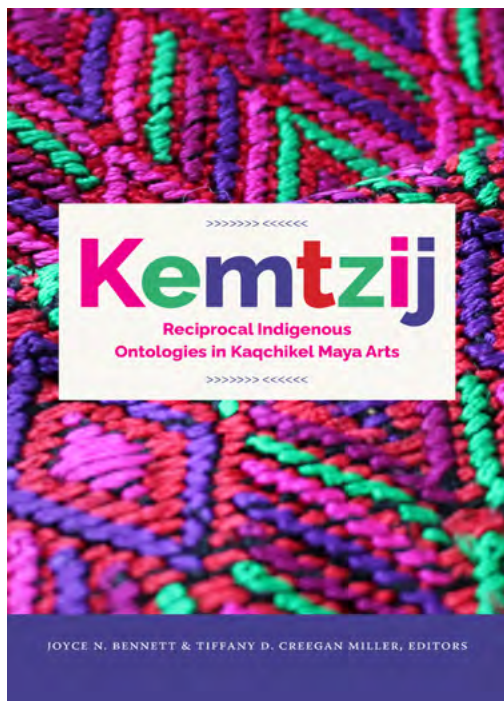

Vasto Pensamiento, Vast Thought Latinas in the Nineteenth- Century California Press

By Vanessa Ovalle Perez

"Like the poetisas that Ovalle Perez recovers, the manuscript itself is a vasto pensamiento of its own, bringing its readers into the world of the poetisas she writes about and the acute reflections of the author.

The coda that closes this book opens the possibility of the reader having vastos pensamientos of their own. Amazing."

Kemtzij

Reciprocal Indigenous Ontologies in Kaqchikel Maya Arts

Edited by Joyce N. Bennett & Tiffany Creegan Miller

“In Kaqchikel Maya, ‘kemtzij’ is a neologism meaning ‘woven words,’ which perfectly expresses this inspired bilingual creation that brings together the work of Kaqchikel and non-Kaqchikel scholars on issues of duality and reciprocity in Maya arts.”

—Carol Hendrickson, Marlboro Institute, Emerson College

Kemtzij bilingually features the artistic contributions of contemporary Kaqchikel Mayas in Guatemala and their diasporas. Rather than representing Kaqchikel Mayas as exclusively existing in their pre-Hispanic past, the contributors to this edited volume—Kaqchikel and non-Kaqchikel scholars—demonstrate the distinct interdisciplinary ways that contemporary Kaqchikels engage with present-day Maya aesthetics and artistic initiatives in Guatemala and abroad. With a focus on the key concepts of reciprocity and duality, the chapters in this book consider the myriad ways in which Kaqchikel Mayas express their identities through poetry, textiles, community street art, and digital photo collages. Kemtzij is unique in its side-by-side presentation in Kaqchikel and English, making it one of few texts to consider Kaqchikel lives and artistic production—and the ontological implications of that work—in and through the Kaqchikel language.

Joyce N. Bennett is associate professor of anthropology at Bates College. She is the author of Good Maya Women: Migration and Revitalization of Clothing and Language in Highland Guatemala (University of Alabama Press, 2022).

Tiffany D. Creegan Miller is assistant professor of Spanish and Latin American studies at Colby College. She is the author of The Maya Art of Speaking Writing: Remediating Indigenous Orality in the Digital Age (University of Arizona Press, 2022).

Reclaiming Black Brazil

Literature, Culture, and the Politics of Diaspora

Edited by

*Cristina Ferreira Pinto-Bailey
& Paulo Dutra*

“A tour de force of recovery and celebration, this groundbreaking collection restores the richness of Black Brazilian literary and cultural achievement to its rightful place in Brazil’s history.”

—Vanessa Valdés, CENTRO Press,

Center for Puerto Rican Studies, Hunter College

Open access: 979-8-89506-042-1

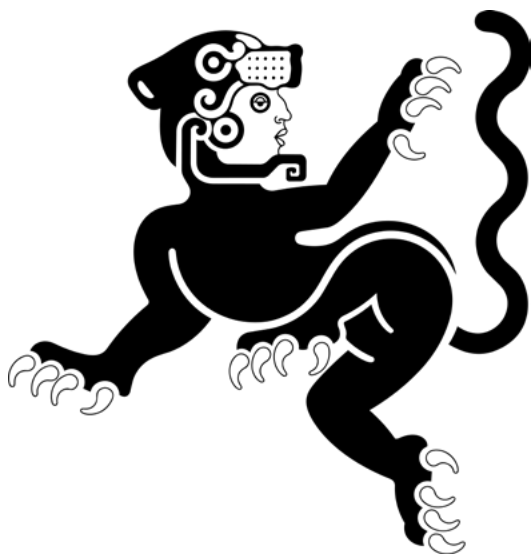

Paperback: 979-89506-041-4

Hardcover: 979-8-89506-043-8

Covering nearly two centuries of cultural production, this compelling collection brings together critical readings from the genesis of Afro-Brazilian literary studies alongside some of Brazil’s most vital contemporary voices. From nineteenth-century pioneer Maria Firmina dos Reis to the boundary-breaking trans performer Linn da Quebrada, the contributions to this book trace a powerful lineage of Black intellectual, artistic, and political expression. By mapping this expansive tradition across literature, music, and cultural thought, this book reveals not only the richness of Afro-Brazilian creativity, but also why Brazil still struggles to fully embrace its Blackness. Both historically grounded and sharply contemporary, it is an essential exploration of race, culture, and resistance in Brazil that will speak to scholars not just of Brazil but also of Latin America and the African diaspora.

Cristina Ferreira Pinto-Bailey has taught at the University of Texas at Austin, Texas State University, and Pontifícia Universidade Católica–Rio Grande do Sul. Her scholarly work and literary translations appear in Latin American Literature Today, Absinthe, Review: Literature and Arts of the Americas, Revistabrasileira de literatura comparada, Symposium: A Quarterly Journal in Modern Literatures, and other venues.

Paulo Dutra is associate professor of Portuguese and Spanish at the University of New Mexico. He is the author of Aversão oficial: resumida (Malê, 2018), abliterações (Malê, 2019), and O alívio da influência: Machado, Borges e Cervantes na América Latina (EDUFES, 2025).

"Rosa Chávez is one of the most important Indigenous artists from Abiyala (The Americas). Her poetry makes us see the world with a deeply enriching sensibility."

—Emil' Keme, Emory University

In Heart of the Stone, Rosa Chávez celebrates a Maya spirituality that recognizes all things—stones included—as part of the web of life. At the center of the collection is tijax, the poet's nawal represented by obsidian, the volcanic stone. Originally written in Spanish and translated into Maya K'iche' by Wel Raxulew, this stunning trilingual edition brings the poems into English for the first time in Gabriela Ramirez-Chavez's translation. The volume is framed by an introduction from Ramirez-Chavez, photography by Carlos Bernardo Euler Coy, and illustrations by Erick Marvin Boror Velásquez.

Rosa Chávez is an interdisciplinary artist from the Maya K'iche' and Kaqchikel communities in Iximulew (Guatemala) whose creative practice spans poetry, music, film, and performance. Her books of poetry include Casa solitaria (Editorial Oscar de León, 2005), Uk'u'x ri ab'aj / El corazón de la piedra (Monte Ávila Editores, 2010), Espíritu del camino / Rajawal ri b'e [collected poems] (Catafxia Editorial, 2024), and Tijax (La Impresora, 2025). In 2024, she received the Prince Claus Impact Award for her poetry and activism.

Gabriela Ramirez-Chavez is a Seattle-based poet and translator born to Guatemalan immigrants. She is co-translator of Tsunami: Women's Voices in Mexico (The Feminist Press, 2025), and her poetry is featured in literary journals and anthologies, including The Wandering Song: Central American Writing in the United States (Tia Chucha Press, 2017).

Wel Raxulew is a Maya K'iche' linguist, educator, and singer-songwriter from Santa Catarina Ixtahuacán, Guatemala, and the former President of the Academy of Maya Languages of Guatemala.

Constructed Latinx(s) Identities: Racialized Bodies in Visual and Textual Culture

Edited by José I. Lara

Exploring recent forms and interpretations of Latinx communities present in film, literature, television, and other cultural expressions, this volume encourages further debate about racialization and identity formation, propelling all scholars to question their positionality when approaching the concept of Latinx.

Painting History:
The Murals of
Northern Ireland, 1908–2024

By Tony Crowley

A detailed analysis of the complex tradition of muralism in the context of the history that produced it, with particular attention to the cultural politics of this remarkable form. The book raises and discusses theoretical questions about murals and muralism that transcend Northern Ireland.

Media Cultures of the Russian 1990s:
Inventing the Post-Soviet Public Sphere

Edited by Maya Vinokour

Written by an interdisciplinary group of experts, this collection addresses the mutual influence among disparate spheres of public life that enabled the media “Wild West” of the first post-Soviet decade. As a joint platform, the volume and the associated Multimedia Sourcebook of the Russian 1990s present the decade’s media cultures in a manner that reflects their historical interconnectedness and relationship to the global present.

Forgotten Friendships: Yugoslavia and the Anticolonial Francophone World

By Alexandra Perišić

Examining transnational friendships and alliances between intellectuals from Yugoslavia and the Francophone African and Caribbean world during the mid-twentieth century, this study blends archival research, literary analysis, and biography to fill a significant gap in our understanding of how intellectuals from the Global South and the socialist world collaborated on shared goals of decolonization, anti-racism, and socialist worldmaking.

Unserious Ecocriticism: Humor, Play, and Environmental Destruction in Art and Visual Culture

Edited by Jessica Landau and Maria Lux

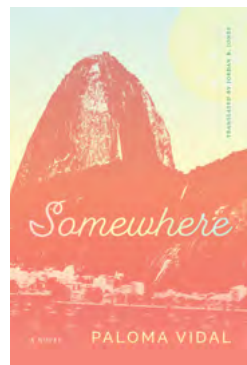

Rather than approach environmental crises through tragic and dire warnings, contributors take seriously the unexpected or easily dismissed, play with format and form, embrace the bodily and abject, take pleasure in their subjects of study, have fun, and crack jokes. Humor, playfulness, parody, and irreverence become tools to challenge expectations, cope with complicated problems, and imagine new futures.

Somewhere: A Novel

By Paloma Vidal,

translated by Jordan B. Jones

An Argentine-Brazilian woman narrates her struggles to determine her identity and maintain relationships while moving between three languages and Los Angeles, Rio de Janeiro, and Buenos Aires, her birthplace. The novel's shifting first-, second-, and third-person narration mirrors the fragmentation the protagonist feels and encounters. Translated into English from Portuguese for the first time.

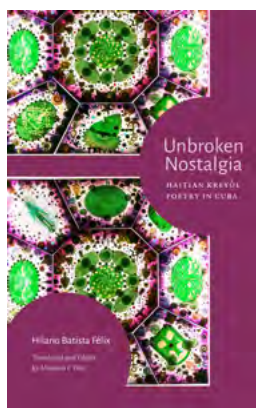

Unbroken Nostalgia: Haitian Kreyòl Poetry in Cuba

By Hilario Batista Félix,

edited & translated by Mariana F. Past

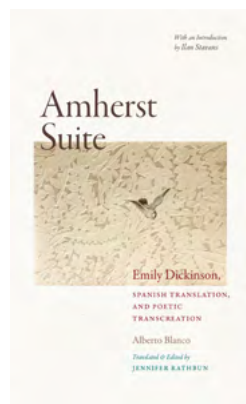

The first English translation and scholarly edition of the collection Nostalji san pwen ni vigil: pwezi kreyòl nan peyi Kiba (2016) by Hilario Batista Félix, Batista's original poems appear alongside facing-page English translations with annotations that clarify historical figures and events, geographical features, and Haitian cultural and religious practices.

Amherst Suite: Emily Dickinson, Spanish Translation & Poetic Transcreation

By Emily Dickinson & Alberto Blanco, edited & translated by Jennifer Rathbun, introduction by Ilan Stavans

A dialogue between Emily Dickinson and Alberto Blanco, one of Mexico's most acclaimed contemporary poets. At the book's heart is a selection of Dickinson's most emblematic poems, translated into Spanish by Blanco. Following these translations is Blanco's collection of original poems dedicated to Dickinson, translated into English by Jennifer Rathbun for the first time.

Accented

Edited by Pooja Rangan, Akshya Saxena, Ragini Tharoor Srinivasan & Pavitra Sundar

Accented publishes works exploring accent as a critical mode of cultural production and interpretation. The series seeks to model accented thinking as a way to disturb the normative logics of academic, archival, media, legal, and bureaucratic structures. We invite rigorous, innovative, and daring scholarship that spans textual, archival, ethnographic, and hybrid approaches across time periods and linguistic contexts. We welcome projects that embrace the multimodal format, such as video essay books, dialogical experiments, and connecting ideas across disciplines.

Electronic Communities of Making

Edited by Anastasia Salter & Stuart Moulthrop

Electronic Communities of Making promotes thoughtful reflection on the communities and practices driving electronic creativity by publishing works that reach across electronic literature, game studies, and internet research to explore the intersection of theory, practice, and pedagogy. We particularly hope to encourage engagement with open-source tools that invite and encourage inclusive making: from established platforms for interactive fiction to alternative game platforms redefining play, to artistic communities shaping procedural expression.

Emergent Ideas: Lateral Books in Cultural Studies

Edited by Robert Carley, Anne Donlon, Eero Laine, SAJ & Chris Alen Sula

Emergent Ideas: Lateral Books in Cultural Studies publishes concise analyses and interpretations of contemporary and emergent cultural phenomena. Titles in the series explore the objects, events, artifacts, and practices that shape and structure communities, politics, and movements. We are especially interested in work that explores cultural phenomena and ideas on the cusp of articulation: the beginnings of a new theory, for example, or the identification of meanings, relations, and practices that are constitutive of a cultural moment or movement. We invite sharp, speculative, and radically novel analyses, critiques, and theories that advance interdisciplinary conversations across the field.

Law, Literature & Culture

Edited by Austin Sarat

Law and literature have for millennia been closely allied as means of persuasion and the creation of cultural norms. This series sets law, literature, and culture in new dialogues, exploring the textual dimensions and cultural work of law and the legal frameworks of literature. The editors seek work that brings literary, legal, and/or cultural analysis together to explore specific social and political problems and that attends carefully to historical contexts and issues. Of particular interest are works that define and argue a thesis drawing on both textual and non-textual sources for which a multimodal, digital presentation offers unique expressive power.

Music & Material Encounters

Edited by Amy Coddington & Jake Johnson

Music & Material Encounters publishes long-form essays and traditional monographs that examine music and materiality. Projects in this series may draw upon music's intersections with print, visual art, and architecture; musical practices of embodiment through studies of anatomy or choreography; and music's interactions with legal and militaristic policies throughout the world. Authors are encouraged to consider how music and musical practices develop alongside the various media they encounter and how their scholarship itself engages with the materiality of this media.

Public Works

Edited by Austin Sarat

Public Works seeks out perspectives of leading scholars in humanities and humanistic social sciences on emergent questions that have long-term significance in our public conversations. Shorter than monographs, these works offer the freedom of long-form essays and the tools of digital media.

Re/verse

Edited by Brian Glavey, Kamran Javadizadeh & Johanna Winant

Re/verse is a series of compact introductions to individual books of poetry. Poems are often understood in relation to their canonization in anthologies and Collected Works, or, more recently, through forms of viral circulation on social media and other digital platforms. Re/verse proposes that the poetry collection itself is a significant unit of meaning and that studying a collection brings new insights to our reading of the poems it contains. These short, accessibly written books will appeal to nonacademic readers and writers as well as teachers and students in literary studies and creative writing classes.

Russian Travelogues

Edited by Sergey Glebov

Russian Travelogues introduces to the English-speaking world narratives of exploration, travel, and conquest produced by representatives of the military, missionary, and scholarly communities in imperial Russia. Books in this series “provide a revealing entree into problems of empire, difference, hierarchical relations, and other complexes of ideas and practices that characterized nineteenth-century approaches to rulership.” —David McDonald, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Urgent Knowledges

Edited by Paul Schroeder Rodríguez

Urgent Knowledges is a translation series that highlights Indigenous, Afro-descendant, and similarly marginalized intellectual traditions in the geocultural area known as Latin America, including the Caribbean. The series considers texts from a variety of periods and genres, in both fiction and nonfiction, that center concepts and practices such as suma qamaña (Aymara for ‘convivial living’) and ubuntu (Nguni for ‘I am because we are’). Urgent Knowledges thus amplifies voices that offer an expansive horizon of living in harmony with oneself, with other human and non-human beings, and with the diverse ecosystems that sustain us all.

The Vera List Center for Art and Politics

The Vera List Center for Art and Politics is a research center and a public forum for public scholarship on art, culture, and politics at The New School. The VLC publishing partnership with ACP furthers each institution’s commitment to advancing the understanding of the intersection of art and politics and centers exciting contemporary publishing on art and politics in an international discourse.

Video Game Art Reader

Edited by Tiffany Funk

The Video Game Art Reader (VGAR) is a peer-reviewed series for video game audiences and practitioners interested in the history, theory, and criticism of video games, explored through the lens of art history and visual culture. We advocate for video games as art, and to create an inclusive, multivalent, diversified conversation about the past, present, and possible futures of video games. The editorial board is composed of artists, scholars, and video game enthusiasts from cultural and educational institutions throughout the United States.
